Once a severe epidemic broke out in Cuttack. Subhas Bose went there with a small team to help the poor and sick people. Some people praised the work being done by Subhas and his friends, but many people made fun of them also. Haider was one person, who always ridiculed them. "These people are mad, stupid and useless. Which person in his senses can appreciate what they are doing?" he would often say.

Once some members of Haider's family fell ill. Haider went out to look for medical help but no help was available anywhere. Haider was very sad as he returned home. But a great surprise was awaiting him there. Subhas and his friends had already reached there with a doctor and were looking after the sick people. Haider thanked them greatly. He was also sorry for having insulted them earlier.

"There is no need to thank us," said Subhas. "We were doing only our duty."
